Reagan Chooses Judge Miner for High U.S. Post

ALBANY (UPI) — United States District Court Judge Roger J. Miner said yesterday President Reagan has nominated him for a seat on the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Second Circuit.

Miner, 51, was in his chambers in Albany when he received a telephone call from Reagan about 5:30 p.m. yesterday.

The president said he had just left Air Force One and was about to sign a paper that he thought was of interest to the judge, Miner said. After Reagan read the nomination document, “I told him that I was very happy that he was signing the paper,” Miner said.

“I’m elated, of course. There has never been a circuit court judge chambered in the City of Albany,” the judge said.

The nomination will now go to the Senate.

Although the court is located at the U.S. Courthouse, Foley Square, New York City, Miner said U.S. Court of Appeals judges maintain chambers in their home areas.

“I don’t expect any difficulty with the Senate confirmation procedure,” Miner said. “My understanding is that I’m occupying one of two new seats created by legislation passed about a year ago.”

“I think it’s a goal of any lawyer or judge to serve on this particular court,” he said.

Miner said he knew he was being considered for the nomination because he was being investigated by the FBI, a standard procedure for such appointments.

Miner, who is a native and resident of Hudson, was a New York State Supreme Court judge from 1976 until 1981, when he was appointed as a U.S. District Court judge.

He said the position on the circuit court offers a salary of about $80,000.

Miner up for U.S. Appeals Court
